

Fall of heaven's requiem

GENRE: Mythical, Fantasy, Military, Action, Mature

Set in a middle-earth-like chronology from another universe. This planet is teeming with fantastic creatures and entities from fairy tales. There are various races, religions, deities, and cultures throughout the globe. The horrible fact is that there is an ongoing conflict that has separated the globe of planet Earth in their language, which is known as "Liro." The world has been split into two parts: west and east. The west is home to species such as humanity, dwarves, elves, and giants, who have formed an alliance known as the "Lux Dominion." The "Tenebris Dominion" races include the daemon race, spirits, fairies, dark elves, dragons, and monsters. Humanity and daemons are the most populous races in both dominions. Since the dawn of time, they have been in conflict about who gets to rule Liro. The issue that the races of Liro face are their rivalry and hatred for one another since each species claims to be the legitimate rulers of the globe.

In this land of wonders and magic. Humans are substantially weaker than the majority of species, whereas daemons have the most devastating power. They were able to overcome their vulnerabilities, however, by forging partnerships with other races, such as the elf people, and developing cunning weaponry. The elves have always chosen to remain out of combat since they are creatures that value knowledge above fighting, yet they are at odds with both species and seek to avoid additional strife. In the Lux domain, the elves have the most gifted affinity for magic and enchantments. Diplomacy and reciprocal alliances are now being negotiated between the elves and humans. The dwarves hide under Liro and isolate themselves from the other races.

The giants are a threatened species that are ostracized by both Daemons and humans. Humans are the ones who have suffered the most losses in the never-ending struggle between mankind and daemons. They pleaded to their deities for assistance, and they responded by assisting them by utilizing human bodies as a vessel for reincarnation. To balance the scales of the fight, the daemons were also granted the same blessing. These reincarnates are regarded as champions for their respective dominions and are highly valued. The continuous battle will finally be resolved, with one side of the dominion wiped off, as with each arrival of the reincarnates. This process has been going on for thousands of years and has produced heroes, tyrants, and legends from all around the world.

Significant Events & History

Reign of the Daemon Dragon King Aemon the 19th (203550 years ago)

Since the beginning of the daemon world's dominion. Five royal families claim to be direct ancestors of the creature that split itself to create the cosmos. The "Deus Mundi mater omnium" is a deity from the elven legend who claims to be the creator of the world. When it was formed, it was told to destroy itself, and its components are the components required to make planets, stars, planets, humans, and other species alike. The daemon race was produced from Deus Mundi's blood, while humans and elves were made from its bodily fluids.

Vash and Eva were the first humans, and Murrkh, Vurdu, and Shiva were the first daemons. Even though daemons are of the same race, the five royal families believe they are superior to other daemons since they are not derived from the original three daemons, but rather from the blood itself. The Nos Feratu, Dragonkin, cat-like daemons named Estasphinx, the Diablos, and the Incuba were the five royal daemon clans. Because they belonged to the most powerful families. Except for the Estaphinxes who stay secluded from the world, the daemon realm was ruled by the remaining five noble daemons.

The King of the Dragonkin Aemon was without a doubt the most vicious and powerful demon king in history. He reigned for two hundred thousand years. He was born among 25 siblings, yet he was already the strongest in his family. He lacked military strategy and recklessly led the daemons into battles like tools and animals. His species detested him because the fatalities of his siege were too dangerous. He was solely interested in murdering for the sake of pleasure and power. He murdered his father, Arimo the 9th, and so became the Daemon King. In the daemon world, the strongest assume rule, and it is a felony to assassinate the monarch. Even if they could, no one could stand up to him, and he ruled with fear. He had hundreds of wives and children, and to the point that every Dragonkin is directly related to him. Only a marriage between nobles might increase the noble daemons' territorial impact. His aides and counselors were high-class daemons who traded their daughters for power. For a long time, the Daemon king Aemon was the most powerful person in Liro, and countless reincarnates died at his hands. He put so much pressure on humanity that technological advancement was delayed for thousands of years. There was no military structure for the daemons, and several coups were staged to overthrow him, but none were successful.

The Goblet of Bastards (2000 years ago).

This is the incident that inspired mankind and its civilizations to unite together to battle the daemon king. This continuing conflict claimed the lives of many reincarnates. Humans had to give birth to tens of offspring in the hope that one of them would live to carry on the legacy. This is the time when enchanters, archers, and knights banded together to improve their battle ability against daemons. The demon king was much too strong on his own, as his magic was unrivaled. Many ethnicities of mankind agreed to develop a more diversified civilization with rich cities to find a way to destroy the Dragon King. Even elves and creatures who like to remain unnoticed collaborated on the formulation of the plan to assassinate him. Later, a few daemons established a truce between the two realms to stop him since the Dragon king was deranged and began murdering his people as well. Humanity's nobility and rulers shared their blood, poured it into a glass, and began to build multiethnic cities. In the Lux dominion, interracial marriages were first permitted. The "Goblet of Bastards" event is regarded in history books as the first act of alliance between races since the beginning of time. Schools and universities and cultural acceptance were created in various cities that formed a melting point for human cultures, but racial tensions were still high. The daemon king was a global enemy so the directed hatred of every race was projected onto him. Many teams of 2 different enchanters and knights were formed as individual military four-unit teams to devise a strategy to destroy the Dragon King's daemon army.

The Golden Age of Reincarnates (1000 years ago)

This occurred during a period when racial tensions were high. Thousands of Liro residents perished like flies, and magic grew so unstable and misused that it was wreaking havoc on the world. Liro became a savage realm where child warriors were the most popular assets in battle. There were several reincarnation vessels for the Deities in Liro during the time with nearly every country in both dominions possessing at least one. During this conflict, the first world-ending apostle was seen attempting to consume the universe from above the skies. They have an abstract body with no features with some of their sizes dependent on the worlds they consumed. They have no bodily features but a hollow body that resembles a constellation of stars and planets within them. They travel from dimensions to consume worlds to balance the concentration of magic in the universe. These entities have no known origin, but they are world-ending beings that must be eradicated as quickly as possible. Magic and weaponry do not affect them since they are immaterial and beyond comprehension. Only abilities and the like can stop them, but they will continue to consume the universe.

The Fall OF the Dragon king and the Reign of the Daemon Queen Marya Amia Nos Feratu the first. (541 years ago)

Aemon, the daemon king, perished at the hands of his newlywed bride after repeated attempts on his life. His wife was 200 years old at the time, while he was hundreds of years older. Even by demon standards, she was married at an inappropriate age. She is a noble-born daemon from one of the five royal clans, the Nos Feratu. She enjoyed a life of luxury and dignity until she was forced to marry the Daemon King to promote her father's goal of power. Her father Zenomias had also used his daughter as a tool of manipulation, instructing her to murder Aemon while he was vulnerable. Because he is usually engaged with conquest, The Daemon King's wives seldom see him. Her nobility and prestige were rendered meaningless after her marriage to the Daemon King since she was treated in the same manner as her slave-like co-wives. She took her time and detested the reality she lived in until she decided to take the risk of murdering the Daemon king in his sleep. His two-hundred-thousand-year rule came to an end 500 years ago. Marya was crowned Daemon Queen of the Tenebris Dominion in the dragon king's year 203550.

The succession rule states that whoever murders the daemon king would be executed. Marya exploited this opportunity to accuse her father of being a conspirator in her actions, and he was executed for treason while she continued to rule the daemon kingdom. Marya was carrying the demon king's final offspring with her. Daemons give birth to their children after a hundred years of waiting. Her first offspring were quadruplet princes descended from two of the five noble demon clans. She slaughtered every Dragonkin in the world before giving birth, even her co-wives who supported her and their offspring. Daron, Damon, Darius, and Dimitri, the quadruplet princes, are the final Dragonkin. Damon, her second-born son, is more powerful than the others, even among his brothers. Because Damon is a reincarnate and one of the last Dragonkin, he is comparatively powerful in comparison to their father. She only made her children her personal war commanders. She transformed the tenebris dominion's barbarian style and tactics into an orderly monarchy. The demon kingdom has a matriarchal monarchy.

The Treaty of Sinners (541 years ago).

The first truce between the two dominions to aid in their recovery from the previous king's insanity. The execution of Zenomias signaled the beginning of a new era for Liro since one menace had been removed. This didn't stop the other races from murdering each other, since their hatred resurfaced after their shared enemy died. Because the Queen was more astute than her ex-husband, she declared a pact between the two dominions. The daemons agreed not to siege the Lux dominion if they agreed to do the same. This was just a ruse as both dominions are waiting for the right moment to annihilate their adversaries. This was hardly a peaceful age, but there were fewer murders than under the previous regime, and some nobility even lived a lavish lifestyle.

MAIN STORY

The Blood of Zenomias Era

Throughout the modern period of Liro, many races and languages worship various deities in the lands of humanity inside the Lux dominion. Luego is a prominent melting pot of many ethnicities and languages on the human continent. Magical universities, guilds, churches, schools, and military sites can be found practically anywhere in the city. The most famous and prominent university of magic is the University of Sedis, where enchanterers are certified by the church and the king as it is the first university formed after the goblet of bastards event. It trains the greatest magicians to protect their territory against the tenebris region, as well as to hunt for daemons that torment villages.

This story's protagonist Diego Salvador is a rich noble-born of house Salvador in a different city named Buena, the son of an elf mother and a human father. Buena is the Salvador's hometown, and they are the little land's rulers and aristocratic lords. He is both his parents' only child. From the moment he was born, he was showered with affection and lived in a large home with his cousins. His parents adored him and worked hard to make him a modest person given the fact that he was a noble. He was a happy child, and his parents were constantly proud of him. The Salvadors are a proud and endearing family who contributed to the goblet of bastards. They are one of the noble families that contributed to the alliance and prosperity of humanity's diversity 2000 years ago.

They are a reputable noble family that is admired by commoners. Ricardo Salvador is Diego's father and the firstborn son of the Salvador family's patriarch. He is presently forty-five years old, and the firstborn daughter, Aniela, is forty years old and has five children with another nobleman. Eduardo Salvador, the last born son, is now twenty-six years old and preparing to be the first Salvador in the military. Although he resembles his mother in appearance, with a slim body, beautiful eyes, pointed ears, slowed aging, and long braided golden hair, Diego is a half-elf. In contrast to normal Salvador men, they all have a tanned complexion, blue eyes, and brown hair, Elven genes are more dominant than human genes. Diego was the result of a harmonious marriage between the two species, demonstrating the importance of the elven race in Lux dominion politics.

Ricardo Salvador is a political figure who works to draft legislation that would enhance relations between the two species of humans and elves. The majority of people dislike this concept since slavery and classism still exist in this age. He is one of the few nobles who really seeks to promote world peace. When Diego was four years old, he attempted magic for the first time, but it was too powerful and might have killed someone with a simple spell. His magical essence was far more potent and concentrated than that of a typical mortal.

His parents' hired magic instructor was astounded when he nearly escaped with his life. Diego was unmistakably a reincarnate. His parents sought to keep the truth from him since they realized the burden that came with the duty of fighting daemons. The word spread, and he became the talk of the country at the moment. The fate of the whole Lux dominion was in his hands, and the governing authorities forced him to train at such a young age. He was never disappointed with the outcome, but he strives to be an enchanter worthy of the human/elf race and the Salvador family.

His story begins ten years later when he has demonstrated tremendous talent in magic and has enrolled in the University of Sedis. Before being assigned to battle against the tenebris dominion, every mighty knight and enchanter must graduate. There, he makes friends with classmates Silvia Meowlith, a quiet elf/daemon hybrid, Corey Bernado, a badmouthed human, and Jerome Berkwood, an introverted and tall human, each with their own story about why they enrolled at the university. Diego, on the other hand, has been burdened with this duty and desires to make the best of it. The daemons have begun preparing their attack into the Lux domain behind the scene while the students are mastering magic and swordsmanship.